

People like people who are like themselves. They collect subordinates or collaborators with whom they have common bonds. They mentor those people, help them move up through the system, and thereby reproduce themselves throughout the organization.